The FARMERS CORNER
by RALPH H. TAYLOR
Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet. It was Kipling, philosopher and poet, who penned that bit of verse, deftly portraying the great gulf which lies between Occident and Orient.

Other poets, dramatists and lyric writers have made other studies in contrast, for contrast bespeaks drama. But for some strange reason, the contrast between rural and urban life in America has never been clearly and incisively depicted, perhaps because the writers and dramatists were unequal to accurate, two-fold diagnosis.

"Grapes of Wrath," "Factories in the Field" and most of the other thematic novels and dramatic efforts dealing with problems of the farm and rural life have represented merely a city man's idea of what was wrong with the folks back on the farm. In no instance, it seems, has there been any slight recognition of the basic fact that urban life and rural life are so different—so different that man-made laws and regulations can't possibly make them similar.

For example, most workers in city jobs are now working an eight-hour day and a five-day week with time-and-a-half for overtime. Modern machines and modern labor unions have brought that about. And even though the labor costs may be high, a factory or a business office can adjust itself to arbitrary limitations on its own hours and days of productive activity. No crop will rot on the vines if the whistle blows at 4:30 instead of at sundown; no cows will go un-milked if an urban industry goes on a five-day-week.

But natural laws, not man-made laws, govern the farm—and farm hours and farm weeks, as a consequence, are still long and always will be, at least during those seasons of the year when nature insists on working over-time.

Urban labor leaders who attempt to organize farm workers in defiance of those natural laws, and who demand short work-days and short weeks in the farming industry, are not fighting farmers, actually; they are fighting nature.

The best evidence of the truth of this statement is a recent item from the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics, entitled "Leisure on the Farm?"

The federal bureau reports: "The average farm work-day in the United States was about one hour shorter on December 1 of last year than on September 1. Seasonal decline in farm operations was given as the reason.

"The length of the work-day of the farm operator dropped from 11.7 hours to 10.3 hours, while the hired worker's day dropped from 10.1 to 9.3 hours."

Labor leaders might well take note that in September (and during the harvest months) the farmer was working nearly a 12-hour day, while his hired man was working little better than a 10 hour day. They might also note that during the winter months, when the farmer was working only 10.3 hours a day, his hired man was working only 9.3 hours.

To the city man, we suppose, that is simply new evidence that the farmer is a reactionary tory, with no conception of the new era brought about by labor unionism.

Sun and rain, harvest seasons and long days, with crops maturing—these are elements which the city labor boss, the city writer and the city poet simply write off as farm propaganda. The fact that the farmer works more hours, regardless of seasons, than his farm worker—that, too, is unimportant. He's simply an un-enlightened hick; a stupid fellow who hasn't streamlined his business.

Yes, it's just about time that some one with intelligence, and a real understanding of our complex civilization, wrote a bit of verse, a novel, or a popular song, which truly interpreted the study in contrasts as between rural and city life in America. It might make for fewer headaches and better understanding.

$500 REWARD OFFERED FOR RETURN ALIVE OF BOY MISSING FROM CAMP

Dewey Baker, Camp Sacramento Superintendent, Says Deputy Sheriff Authorized By Resorts And Home Owners To Announce Offer

Deputy Sheriff Bodie Martin has been authorized by resorts and summer home owners of the Echo Summit and Lake Valley sections to offer a reward of $500 for the safe return of Clarence Murphy, the five-year-old lad who has been missing since Monday from Camp Sacramento.

This was the announcement Thursday noon of Dewey C. Baker, superintendent of Camp Sacramento.

As the fourth day of search for the youngster passed without a trace of him being revealed.

The dam on the small lake in front of the camp site had been removed Wednesday night so that the lake might drain to its lowest possible level, and was replaced Thursday morning, cutting off the flow of water in the American River below the camp.

Under these conditions, a detailed search of the river from Camp Sacramento to Strawberry was made, probing the deep holes with long pole poles provided by the Forest Service.

"Frankly," Baker said, "I don't know what to think; we're just stumped. Every possible clue has been thoroughly checked."

Baker said that some of those who have been identified with the search since the disappearance of the boy was reported Monday morning are inclined to cling to the belief that the boy was drowned despite the failure of two searches of the river to reveal his body.

The camp superintendent said that investigation was being made of the owner of a truck found abandoned in the vicinity. This inquiry was begun Tuesday evening and it developed that the owner of the truck was enroute to Carson Valley, Nevada, to work on a ranch.

Mr. Baker said the truck owner is a Sacramentan and that he is known there but that there is nothing in his past record to lead one to suspect he could have kidnapped the boy.

"He is expected to reach his destination today," Baker said, "and our investigation of that phase of the disappearance will be ended."

The child, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Murphy, of Sacramento, was at the camp with his mother and brother, Patrick, 2. He was last seen Monday morning playing in a sand-box at the camp.

U. S. Financing Brazil Aviation

Army Chief Of Staff Reveals "Red Tape" Delayed Airways Work

WASHINGTON (UP)—Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, told the senate military affairs committee today that the United States is financing the expansion of aviation in Brazil to surround this hemisphere with a ring of utero-hemisphere with a ring of protection.

Marshall's reference to Brazil came in the midst of discussion of legislative controls over operation of the armed services.

Congress, he said, voted an emergency "blank check" of $100,000,000 in cash and an additional sum of equal size in contract authorizations, specifying that two thirds of both funds must be earmarked for the army.

The stipulation, he said, enmeshed the army in so much "red tape" that it was "pushed back three months in the development of essential air facilities in—I risk it—Brazil where PanAmerican Airways has been improving facilities so we can move expeditiously."

SOVIET ADMITS LARGE GAINS BY NAZIS

Germans Are Shown To Be Near Smolensk, 235 Miles From Russian Capital

By UNITED PRESS
A Nazi spearhead has rammed through the Russian defenses to Smolensk, important military stronghold and railroad junction 235 miles from Moscow it was indicated today.

The German breakthrough to Smolensk—claimed unofficially by Berlin and tacitly admitted by Moscow—appeared to be the first important military success won by the Wehrmacht in many days.

There was no clear indication as yet to the size of the German force which might have reached Smolensk but the Russian high command admitted that fighting was in progress in that area and German unofficial sources claimed that the city had been captured.

The German high command made no mention of Smolensk in its communiqué, restricting itself to sweeping generalities except for a claim that Chisinau, capital of Bessarabia, had been taken.

The intensification of the Russo-German war was matched by a steady rise in far eastern tension where the Japanese were busy erecting a new cabinet which was expected to be along strict nationalist, militaristic lines.

Shanghai was convinced that Japan has submitted demands of an ultimatum character to the French concerning Indo China and specifically the Camranh naval base.

But there was considerable suspicion that the Japanese are simultaneously preparing for action in Siberia.

It appeared the French would be forced to yield in Indo China and that no great forces would be required to force her submission.

Meantime, it was indicated Japan is gathering troops and materials for possible operations against Russia, presumably at the bidding of the Germans.

The Royal Air Force carried out its heaviest daylight attack of the war on Rotterdam where 22 ships were reported sunk or damaged. Tonnage of the shipping was estimated at 140,000 to 145,000 tons and was said to include the 17,000 ton liner Boleroan.

The British planes flew low over the city in "V" formations which brought cheers from the Dutch populace, aroused by the British propaganda campaign centering on the letter V—for victory.

The V campaign appeared to have caught on as no other British propaganda drive has since the start of the war.

'YOO-HOO' HIKE ORDER UPHOLD

"We Always Support Our Generals," Says Patterson, Undersecretary Of War

WASHINGTON (UP)—The war department today upheld Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear's 15 mile punishment for 350 troopers who yoo-hoed at girls in shorts on a Memphis golf course.

Announcement of the ruling was made by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson.

Patterson told a press conference that the matter was closed as far as the war department is concerned. Lear, he said, submitted a full report—which will not be made public—on why he ordered members of the 110th Quartermaster Battalion to march 15 miles as a disciplinary measure.

"We always support our generals," he added. "Where would we be otherwise? We have matters of far more pressing importance in the war department than that."

The luckless troops incurred Lear's displeasure by calling to the shorts-clad golferettes as they were riding back to their home camp at Robinson, Ark. He promptly stopped the golf course, ordered the 15 mile hike. He is commander of the second army.

Patterson said that the incident had been exaggerated out of all proportions although he agreed that it "made a fine news story for the last 10 days."

When you think of what's happening here and abroad, however, it was relatively unimportant," he added.

Prison Bloodhounds Are Called To Somerset To Press Pursuit Thursday

HAVE YOU SEEN THIS MAN?

Worley McMurray is being sought as an escaped prisoner by the sheriff's office.

He is 28 years old, six feet and one-half inch tall, weighs 190 pounds, has blonde hair and blue eyes. He bears fresh scars on the bridge of his nose and left side of his head above the ear.

When he escaped he was wearing tan oxfords with smooth soles and rubber heels; light gray pants, a blue shirt with a light stripe and a gray Dobbs hat, purchased at Sacramento and bearing the initials "H. E."

He has exceptionally large feet, walks with a long stride and turns his toes out.

The pace of the man-hunt which has been under way since Worley McMurray escaped custody last Saturday afternoon was suddenly increased Thursday morning.

Deputy Sheriffs Euell Gray and D. W. Le Bourveau sent a request to Folsom prison that the prison bloodhounds be returned to the hunt and the deputies left hurriedly for the Somerset district near where McMurray is claimed to have been seen Tuesday morning.

The nature of the information on which the officers acted was not known and the officers had not returned to nor communicated with their office up to three o'clock Thursday afternoon.

While a rumor associated a "burglary" Wednesday night with the reason for the quickening interest in the manhunt District Attorney Henry S. Lyon said during the afternoon that he did not know of any burglary.

Mr. Lyon said that he could not say whether there had been any burglary but that such a matter was not mentioned to him by the deputies when they stated they were returning to the search.

8 Dodge Hurts In Plane Mishap

Pilot Sets Disabled Ship Down In "Belly Landing" As Landing Gear Is Damaged

LOS ANGELES (UP)—Eight persons were trapped more than three hours in a crippled Western Airlines transport plane before the resourceful pilot, Capt. Lester C. Holton, 33, brought the big ship to a perfect belly landing on a buckled landing gear.

Holton set down the big twin-motored Douglas sleeper at Municipal Airport late yesterday, after cruising helplessly most of the afternoon. When the ship eased into a headwind and skidded along a grass section of the field, 5,000 spectators cheered.

The airliner, with five passengers and a crew of three, left Union Air Terminal at Burbank for a hop to San Diego. When Holton tried to land for a regular 10-minute stop at Long Beach, the right wheel struck an obstruction on the runway.

Holton instantly took to the air again. He returned to Burbank and by radio communicated with the control tower at Union Air Terminal. Another plane went up, and engineers aboard examined the landing gear.

The pilot then was given orders to remain aloft until his 400 gallons of gasoline were exhausted. Finally he flew to municipal air terminal and landed. The blades of the steel propellers folded beneath the motors as they ploughed furrows in the ground, but the ship otherwise was undamaged.

Chairman Cyril Heuser, "of the Board of Supervisors, was in the county seat Thursday on business.

Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Reckers, Miss Florence Reckers and Mrs. Minnie Allen, spent the fore part of the week at Yosemite National Park.

Don't Make Arithmetic a Nightmare to Children

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, P.H.D.

• A mother writes of her problems:

"Some while ago you referred to 'Making Arithmetic Easy,' or 'Simplifying Arithmetic' which from your own observation and experience you had worked out. From what I gleaned it was just what we all needed. We are especially eager to have it during the summer vacation.

"Arithmetic was a nightmare for my eldest girl. Somehow she got through the early grades without mastering the fundamentals of arithmetic.

"I really believe the 'Devil Speed' is partly responsible. Give our youngsters time and an atmosphere of calm and they are very efficient. Rush them and they are almost helpless. The speed system is so cruel. I've watched the speed system ruin the nerves of my four children.

Learning Basic Principles

"Will you send me all the information I should have to help my youngsters in arithmetic. I'll be so grateful, and know the youngsters will. Please be sure to include the pages of simple addition and subtraction facts and information on where I may secure any self-teaching materials you have written for children. I enclose a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it."

All these materials were gladly sent to the writer. Also I wrote suggesting that, in choosing from the self-help descriptions, each child be given the booklet or material one or two grades below where he is. Most of all, each should learn by heart the 100 simple addition facts and the 100 simple subtraction facts, attacking only five or six of them at a sitting. Failure to learn these simple basic number facts is far more often the source of arithmetic trouble in the upper grades and high school, than any other cause.

Things Made Too Difficult

The trouble with most parents and teachers is that they nearly always are looking for something complex and difficult. When one tries to induce them to deal with very simple, easy, basic matters they suppose it amounts to nothing. All too much of our teaching of making things difficult for children to learn. Yet some people don't like these suggestions because they think them too simple. A certain woman once said she did not like the sermon of a famous preacher whom she had travelled far to hear, because she could understand everything he said. The same fallacious reasoning is sometimes applied to teaching.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. A mother of two boys, eight and eleven, wishes to know how "to overcome being so upset when I hear my children read." She courteously enclosed a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

A. The only way I know is by eternal self-discipline, made easier as we put ourselves in our imagination in the child's place; walk away from the child the moment you find your voice rising or feel the least disturbance at the pit of the stomach. I sent her my Home Helps in Reading.

When Robin Godine, rich society girl, falls in love with Cary Craig, who works for an escort bureau, she hires him to take her out two evenings a week. Cary is doing escort work to pay his way through medical school, and also to help his foster father, Jed Prosser, an old man who has seen better days but is now reduced to running an unprofitable beer parlor. Cary loves Robin but, because of her wealth, is determined never to let her know how he feels. Her father, John Godine, who had married her mother, now dead, only after taking her away from his best friend, Garth Warwick, is haunted by his wife's dying words, "Don't let Robin make a loveless marriage," but he nevertheless has broken up every romance Robin has had, because he thinks every suitor is after her money. Hence, when he learns of her association with Cary Craig, he determines to put a stop to it.

CHAPTER IX

JOHN GODINE had to admit that the report on Cary Craig that he had got at the escort bureau was highly favorable. Nevertheless, he intended to see the young man, and make certain arrangements that would put a stop to Robin's going out with him.

Hence, a few mornings after his talk with Robin, finding a little time on his hands, he set out to find Cary. After failing to locate him at his apartment, he decided to inquire for him at the beer parlor run by the old man who had reared him.

He consulted a notebook. "Jed's Beer Parlor." He frowned. He liked neither the name nor the location of the place. However

MEANWHILE, at Jed's Beer Parlor, Jed and Lyriss were having a stormy scene with the cook, who also served as dishwasher and general handy man.

"Well, I'm quittin' and I don't want any more of your lip!" the florid-faced fellow was saying to Lyriss, who stood facing him angrily, hands on her hips.

"But you can't just leave like this—you've got to give notice!" Lyriss told him.

"Reckon I don't have to give notice since I ain't had my pay for two weeks."

"But I can give it to you tomorrow," Jed placated.

"Well, I ain't stayin' no matter what."

Just then, the entrance of a thin, shabby-looking young fellow interrupted the argument.

"Could you spare a sandwich and a beer?" he entreated Jed. "I ain't been able to get a job since I got out of stir."

"How long ago was that?" snapped Lyriss.

"Three weeks," the man answered.

"That's too bad," Jed said sympathetically. He turned to the cook. "Rustle him a sandwich."

"I will not!" The cook took off his apron and unrolled his shirt sleeves. "Told you I was quittin' here, didn't I? It's because of feedin' every beggar that comes in that you can't pay your help!"

AT THAT moment, Brad Molter appeared hesitantly in the doorway.

"Excuse me," he said, "but there's a fellow out here says he wants to see Jed Prosser. That's you, ain't it?"

"Yes, Brad."

Jed moved toward the front room, with Lyriss following.

As he reached the doorway, and caught a glimpse of John Godine seated at a corner table he paused and stared for a moment, then stepped back so suddenly that he collided with Lyriss.

"Jed!" she exclaimed. "What's the matter?"

"Sh-h—," he cautioned. There was a strange look in his eyes. "It's— it's nothing." But he was trembling.

Then, getting control of himself he moved out into the front room and approached John Godine.

"I'm Jed Prosser," he said quietly. "Did you wish to see me?"

John Godine was gazing at him. Then he leaped to his feet sending his chair over with a clatter.

"Good lord! Garth!" he gasped.

This attractive model is made of gray linen and features the deep plunging neckline and one-button closing. Clever seaming curves into a trim waistline. Slot pockets follow the curved line at hips, and the skirt has two inverted box-pleats front and back. The monotone of the suit permits all sorts of gay complements and accessories, such as the striped linen hat and bag illustrated.

men between 21 and 36 years. Eight hundred capsules, which have been under heavy guard since the order numbers were placed in them, will be drawn at the inter-departmental auditorium, starting at 7 p. m. EST.

Selective service officials planned to integrate the new registrants in the lists of men already classified by local boards. For example, if a local board with 200 new registrants, has classified 2000 men who have not been called for service, one new registrant will be inserted in the list after every 10 classified men.

Despite the fact that 800 numbers will be drawn, the highest registration reported by any local board was 661 in Baltimore. The extra numbers will provide for late registrants.

Officials expected that all the numbers would be drawn within two hours, as compared to the 17 hour drawing last fall.

LOTUS NEWS NOTES

The two large dredgers that came to our town two years ago this month are still working away night and day piling up huge piles of stones on our dear old South Fork of the American River. They have some two or three months more to work and then they will have all their land worked out unless they purchase some more. Soon they will bid farewell to Lotus and depart leaving nothing behind them but rock piles for the traveling public and us old timers to look at the rest of our days.

Mrs. A. Flanagan, Mrs. T. Daley, Mrs. Carlson, Bud Flanagan, Jack McDonald, also Carlson Jr., and Flanagan Jr. all nieces and nephews of the Luneman brothers, arrived at the Luneman home from San Francisco Saturday evening and will visit for a time with their uncles George, Fred and Arnold Luneman in the Webber Creek district.

Judge Edward Silva, justice of the peace of Newcastle, and his granddaughter, Mrs. Minerva Gibson, were callers in our town Sunday morning going up to the McKenny mine to call on Al and his wife. The Judge is one of our native sons, born at Rattlesnake bar this county 87 years ago last February. Judge Silva was elected Justice of the Peace for Newcastle township in 1934 and has held the office for the past 7 years. We must say our judge at his age is very active and the writer was much pleased to meet him.

Mrs. Harry Reaside and her lady friend drove down to Sacramento on Wednesday morning to attend to business matters returning towards evening. The ladies report it was very hot in the capital city and could not see a thermometer in the city to tell how high the mercury stood. Anyway it stood at 104 degrees in Lotus from noon to 4 p. m.

Jesse Goldstein of Brooklyn, N. Y., was in our town Sunday afternoon and also at Coloma talking to some of our old timers about the late Chas. E. Markham, gathering information on the life of Markham which he is writing up.

Mrs. Irma Lawyer and Geo. Hays were down from Uncle Toms resort last Tuesday and spent a short time in our town returning home to the resort by Placerville.

Joe Hansen has just finished painting the Rasmussen brothers dwelling and has made a very nice job of his work.

So far our old historical town of Uniontown is still off the map—by having a marker put up at each end of the old mining town. Nearly a year ago the writer called upon Wallace Ripley the secretary of the El Dorado county chamber of commerce at Placerville and was promised by Mr. Ripley that our old town would have a marker and we hope it will soon be seen by the traveling public on our street.

LATROBE NEWS NOTES

Some excitement was caused in our community on Thursday of last week when a small grass fire broke out on the R. L. Dodson ranch. Fortunately it happened quite early in the morning, with very little wind to carry it along and was soon brought under control. The neighbors were very kind and hurried to give their help, also the fire truck from El Dorado but the fire was all out when they arrived, having only burned over about an acre.

Tom Jack has returned to his home after visiting at Kyburz with his daughter, Mrs. Gordon Estey and family. He also visited a few days in Placerville.

CHEESE WAFERS—TEMPTING TID BITS!

THE whole duty of proper appetizers, as the name implies, is to whet the taste for the larger feasts of dining to come. They are designed to tempt, to tease, to please—and as is proper for these insubstantial tid-bits, they must be small, light, and delicious.

Such an appetizer, specially designed to flirt mildly with appetites, is the cheese wafer—mere wisp of a flavorful cracker, owing its special delicacy to mingled flavors of butter, American cheese, spicy seasonings, and oven-popped rice cereal crumbs. The ready-to-eat rice cereal, rolled into fine crumbs and used as the basis for a wafer mixture has a most delicate and pleasing flavor—a lightness of texture so desirable in before-dinner appetizers.

Cheese wafers made with rice cereal crumbs as the basis are simple to make, too—and may be prepared well in advance of the dinner party. These small morsels of goodness are perfect served with glasses of chilled tomato juice or fruit juice.

They're an excellent choice, too, with soups and salads—lending character and flavor accent to many other foods.

KRISPIES CHEESE WAFERS

1/4 cup butter
2 cups soft American cheese, grated
1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
3 drops Tabasco sauce
3 cups oven-popped rice cereal
1/4 cup flour

Blend butter and cheese thoroughly; add Worcestershire and Tabasco sauce. Roll cereal into fine crumbs, mix with flour and add to cheese mixture. Shape into rolls one to two inches in diameter. Slice into wafers 1/4-inch thick, or until firm. Bake in refrigerator for two hours, or until firm. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for twelve minutes. Serve as an appetizer or with salad.

Yield: 60 wafers (1 1/4 inches in diameter).
